Please AMEND the paragraph beginning at page 4, line 6, as follows:

A3
However, according to the technique of the invention disclosed in JP 2000-364371, it is required that a user finds a service provider that actively issues coupons, obtains user entry information on the service provider, registers the user entry information on the service provider to a buddy list, and notifies the service provider of the registration of the user entry information. If such time and labor involved in these operations can be reduced, the registration to a buddy list is expected to be promoted.

Please AMEND the paragraph beginning at page 3, line 30, as follows: Technology Center 2100

JP 2000-364371 [A] , corresponding to USSN 09/815,051 filed March 23, 2001 and assigned to a common assignee herewith, discloses an invention of two of the coinventors herein and which is foundational work of the coinventors herein leading to the invention disclosed and claimed herein, affording an effective technique of giving a user an incentive to register user entry information of a service provider to a buddy list of a user. According to this technique, a user registers user entry information on a service provider to a buddy list and notifies the service provider of the registration, whereby the service provider notified of the registration issues coupons regarding the provision of service to the user. Issuance of coupons attracts users, so that registration of the service provider to a buddy list can be expected to some degree.

Please AMEND the paragraph beginning at page 4, line 6, as follows:

However, according to the technique of the invention disclosed in JP 2000-364371 [A], it is required that a user finds a service provider that actively issues coupons, obtains user entry information on the service provider, registers the user entry information on the service provider to a buddy list, and notifies the service provider of the registration of the user entry information. If such time and labor involved in these operations can be reduced, the registration to a buddy list is expected to be promoted.
